QUESTION 2 (direct questions) [10 marks]

Question 2.1 [maximum 2 marks]

Explain what the term "international insolvency law" means.

Although all developed legal systems incorporate bankruptcy and insolvency systems, they differ in approaches, policies, and both substantive and procedural rules. As businesses become increasingly globalized, international insolvency law seeks to address the legal issues that emerge when a debtor's financial problems extend across multiple countries (debtors, creditors, or assets may be located in different jurisdictions). Its primary goal is to establish a framework for addressing these challenges fairly, efficiently, and consistently while considering the concerns of creditors, debtors, and the public across diverse jurisdictions.

Question 2.2 [maximum 5 marks]

Differentiate between the concepts of universality and territoriality in cross-border insolvency.

Universality and territoriality are two concepts/approaches to dealing with the problems associated to insolvency cases that involve multiple jurisdictions. The universalism (generally favored by international observers and commentators) is an approach that seeks to consolidate the insolvency proceedings of a debtor in a single, primary jurisdiction, which should encompass all the debtor's assets and liabilities, regardless of where they are located globally. In this scenario, the officeholder should possess the means to manage and secure all assets, while simultaneously ensuring that all creditors worldwide are afforded an equal opportunity to engage in the proceedings. This approach demands a significant degree of trust in foreign legal systems and their insolvency proceedings, particularly considering the necessity for extraterritorial effects (some difficulties such as choice-of-law and priority rules must be addressed to the universality approach to be effective).

On the other hand, territoriality emphasizes separate proceedings in each jurisdiction where the debtor has assets or creditors, prioritizing local interests. Under territorialism, each jurisdiction that holds a substantial link to the debtor's financial circumstances can initiate and supervise insolvency proceedings within its own boundaries. These proceedings may function autonomously, without the existence of a centralized, global insolvency procedure. The assets involved in each specific proceeding should be confined to the jurisdiction where that proceeding is being conducted, and the creditors' capacity to submit their claims should also be limited to that same jurisdiction.

There is scope to elaborate with respect to recognition and effect in that for example, with universalism, recognition and effect requires that other States recognise that one set insolvency proceedings (that all agreed is the appropriate jurisdiction) and recognise it as having extraterritorial effect in their States.

Question 2.3 [maximum 3 marks]

Describe three recent examples of developments in the Middle East region to reform domestic insolvency laws or to address international insolvency issues.

Following the launch of a comparative survey of insolvency systems in the MENA region (joint initiative of the Hawkamah Institute for Corporate Governance, the World Bank, the OECD and Insol International based on the World Bank's Principles for Effective Insolvency and Creditors Rights Systems as an indicator of best practice), UAE reformed its domestic insolvency law in 2016 and 2019, and Saudi Arabia and Dubai reformed their domestic insolvency laws in 2018 and 2019 respectively. On the other hand, to address international insolvency specifically, Bahrain adopted the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency in 2018 as did the Dubai International Financial Centre in 2019. [Note: there are no specific details in the textbook regarding the content of the changes that were implemented by the reforms]

The answer would be improved if it also included information in your own words and if there were elaboration provided.

QUESTION 3 (essay-type questions) [15 marks in total]

Question 3.1 [maximum 5 marks]

Write a brief note on the differences regarding the objectives of insolvency for individuals and corporations.

Regarding the objectives of insolvency for individuals and corporations, individual insolvency proceedings are typically geared towards enabling a fresh start for the debtor (including by protecting the debtor from his creditor's harassment), whereas corporate insolvency proceedings are oriented mainly towards preserving the business (or its viable parts), as well as protecting the interests of creditors, shareholders, other stakeholders, employees, taxes income etc. Regarding consequences and liability, individuals are personally liable for their debts and financial obligations. In contrast, corporations can hold their directors or officers accountable for any wrongdoing or financial mismanagement. Further, it is only towards individuals that the possibility of exempted assets is applicable. Some legal systems permit insolvent individuals to retain specific assets that are necessary for their own or their dependents' sustenance.

To improve your responses, ensure they are commensurate with the mark allocation – while Q 3.1 asks for a brief note, it is for 5 marks.

Question 3.2 [maximum 5 marks]

Write a brief note on the difficulties that may be encountered when dealing with insolvency law in a cross-border context relating to pertinent differences in the relevant systems.

Aside from the challenges posed by the lack of a global insolvency law system and a global court for cross-border insolvency cases, there are additional complexities to contend with. Friman addresses the significant challenge of the difficulty in establishing a common definition of "insolvency." It usually signifies a scenario where the total outstanding liabilities exceed the measurable value of all the debtor's assets, often requiring some degree of persistence in this negative net worth state. However, there are instances where a more short-term inability to service debts, such as a liquidity crisis, is considered sufficient grounds for initiating "insolvency proceedings."

Omar highlights that variations in domestic laws significantly affect the rights and priorities of creditors in insolvency cases, particularly when multiple states are involved. This situation inevitably leads to conflicts of laws, further complicated by factors such as security, set-off, netting arrangements, and creditor protections outlined in national laws.

It is also worth mentioning the 9 key issues in cross-border cases identified by universalism's supporter J L Westbrook, which are: (i) recognition of the foreign representative; (ii) moratorium on creditor actions; (iii) creditor participation; (iv) executory contracts; (v) coordinated claims procedures; (vi) priorities and preferences; (vii) avoidance provisions powers; (viii) discharges; and (ix) conflict-of-law issues.

Question 3.3 [maximum 5 marks]

What multilateral steps have been taken in the 21st century to promote harmonisation of domestic insolvency laws? In your opinion, how much impact are these likely to have in addressing international insolvency issues? Include reasons for your opinion.

Several multilateral steps have been taken in the 21st century to promote the harmonization of domestic insolvency laws and address international insolvency issues, such as the introduction and adoption by many countries of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency

[Note: unfortunately, I did not have time to finish the answer]

While adoption of the MLCBI may harmonise various domestic insolvency laws in so far as they address international insolvency issues, the question addresses more broadly the harmonisation of domestic insolvency laws in general. See the 'model' answer on this sub-question.
