QUESTION 2 (direct questions) [10 marks]

Question 2.1 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly discuss and compare countries whose insolvency law systems have historical roots in civil law with countries whose insolvency law systems have historical roots in English law.

In comparison to insolvency legal systems rooted in English law, countries whose insolvency law systems have historical roots in civil law have been relatively less responsive to adopting the concept of rehabilitation of the insolvent debtor. An example of a civil law-rooted country is the Netherlands.

A better approach to answering this question would involve listing countries that are historically English based and countries that are historically civil law based and discussing their differences, especially with respect to the adoption of common law in English based countries of codification in civil jurisdictions.

Question 2.2 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly explain the difference(s) between the principle of universalism, the principle of modified universalism, and the principle of territorialism.

The concepts of universalism, modified universalism and territorialism can be said to differ in their stances on the need for:

- a. Number of distinct insolvency proceedings that may be opened against an insolvent debtor: universalism advocates for a single insolvency proceedings and applicable law to effect a collective distribution of all the debtor's assets across the globe among all its creditors (regardless of their location), while modified universalism acknowledges the possibility of having a main or primary proceedings in one jurisdiction and other ancillary proceedings in other jurisdictions for this purpose. Conversely, territorialism promoted the opening of a distinct insolvency proceedings in every jurisdiction within which the debtor's assets are located.
- b. The number of distinct laws or legal systems that should govern the (various) insolvency proceedings commenced against a debtor: on this point, universalism and modified universalism align on the credo that a single insolvency law should apply, while territorialism is based on the idea that the domestic laws of each state where an insolvency proceedings is opened should apply within the territorial boundaries of that state.

Some elaboration is warranted.

Question 2.3 [maximum 4 marks]

Briefly indicate initiatives undertaken to assist with the resolution of international insolvency issues in Latin America and discuss the differences between those initiatives.

Some significant initiatives that have been introduced to address international insolvency issues in Latin America are the Montevideo Treaty on International Commercial Law (1889), the Montevideo Treaty on International Commercial Terrestrial Law (1940), the Montevideo Treaty on Procedural Law, and the Havana Convention on Private International Law.

In terms of the differences between these initiatives, the Havana Convention has been more widely adopted by states in Latin and Central America. Also, the Havana Convention is also more exemplary of the principle of universalism, promoting the adoption of single insolvency proceedings to regulate the assets and liabilities of the insolvent debtor. Some elaboration would be beneficial

QUESTION 3 (essay-type questions) [15 marks in total]

Question 3.1 [maximum 7 marks]

It is said that the terms “bankruptcy” and “insolvency” may be used interchangeably. Discuss whether or not you agree with this statement, and why or why not. In your answer take care to include a discussion regarding: (i) what meaning may be ascribed to “bankruptcy” and “insolvency”, (ii) the essential characteristics of “bankruptcy” and “insolvency” and (iii) any differences that may arise when a “bankruptcy” / “insolvency” involves a corporation rather than an individual.

I disagree with the statement because the terms “bankruptcy” and “insolvency” have been widely used to describe different phenomena or concepts. On the one hand, “bankruptcy” has been used to describe the insolvency of a natural person (i.e., personal or consumer bankruptcy), while “insolvency”, the collective debt recovery process applicable to companies or corporate bodies. The need to distinguish the terms in question is underscored by the fact that different consequences apply to consumer and corporate insolvency. For instance, the insolvency proceedings against a company could ultimately lead to its dissolution. In these modern time, a natural person’s insolvency will not usually lead to their “dissolution” or death.

On the other hand, bankruptcy has also been used to denote the state when a formal insolvency proceedings has been activated regarding a debtor, while insolvency refers to the stage when the elements which qualify the debtor for that “bankruptcy” proceedings have occurred but no formal insolvency proceedings have been opened or triggered.

In my view, the nuances in the principles and ideas embedded in the terms “bankruptcy” and “insolvency”, begs for purposeful use of each of the terms.

This question required deeper consideration of the essential characteristics of insolvency / bankruptcy and the differences between individual / company insolvency. Relevant matters included Wood’s consideration of essential characteristics, the different objectives of corporate and individual insolvency and matters pertaining to exempt property.

3

Question 3.2 [maximum 5 marks]

Discuss some of the challenges which arise in cross-border insolvency that make it difficult to develop a single global cross-border insolvency dispensation.

Developing a single global cross-border insolvency dispensation has proven difficult due to the differences in the legal system, standards, and approaches to insolvency law of countries.

This is a 5 mark question which required deeper analysis. It would be beneficial for you to also consider the matters raised by Friman, Omar and Westbrook

0.5

Question 3.3 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly discuss what is meant by “hard law” and what is meant by “soft law” in the context of international insolvency. In your answer you should also provide examples and discuss the varying success of “hard” and “soft” laws in providing solutions to the challenges of international insolvency.

In the context of international insolvency, hard law refers to binding laws that apply to states (countries) by virtue of their accession to the same. Treaties and conventions are instruments of hard law. Upon ratification by state parties, the states are obligated to implement their provisions in their domestic law. A typical example of a hard law instrument is the Nordic Convention of 1933, a multilateral treaty between states in the Scandinavian region aimed at regulating certain insolvency matters between the state parties. The European Insolvency Regulations is a non-treaty/convention regional instrument that regulates international insolvency within the European Union. Matters of success require deeper consideration

On the other hand, soft law refers to non-binding initiatives introduced by multilateral organisations to promote ease in the resolution of cross-border insolvency issues. These initiatives are intended to assist states to align their domestic laws with international best practices. The UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-border Insolvency is an example of a soft law instrument that has recorded great success in furthering the easy resolution of the cross-border insolvency elements and promoting coordination and cooperation of international insolvency matters. Other examples of soft law instruments are the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Cross-border Insolvency and the World Bank Principles for Effective Creditor and Debtor Regimes.
