QUESTION 2 (direct questions) [10 marks]

Question 2.1 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly discuss and compare countries whose insolvency law systems have historical roots in civil law with countries whose insolvency law systems have historical roots in English law.

Most insolvency laws in countries are based on either English law or civil law because most countries were colonised. In Africa, countries such as Nigeria, Kenya, Botswana, Zambia and Tanzania have historical roots in English law because those countries were colonised by England. Portugal colonised Angola and Mozambique and so those countries have historical roots in civil law. However, there are some countries in Africa that have a mixture of both, namely South Africa and Namibia. These countries are founded in Roman-Dutch (civil) law and English law as both Holland and England ruled over these countries at some point. Moving into Asia, India also has historical roots in English law, while South America is rooted in civil law.

This answer also required a discussion of the common law aspect of English law of codification

Question 2.2 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly explain the difference(s) between the principle of universalism, the principle of modified universalism, and the principle of territorialism.

The principle of universalism is when more than one insolvency proceeding in different countries can be dealt with under the provision of one umbrella insolvency law. This means that the law where the main insolvency proceeding is held, has universal and worldwide effect and consequences. To simplify further, there would be one insolvency proceeding that deals with all the worldwide assets of a debtor. There is scope to consider forum and COMI This differs from territorialism which country specific. Here, worldwide creditors are able to participate in proceedings and their claims are treated on the same footing.

The principle of modified universalism is a legal concept where courts dealing with their own insolvency matters are supposed to co-operate with one another. When a debtors main interest has been determined (the country/state) and the main insolvency proceeding has started, this is then supported by secondary or accompanying proceedings in another country/state. COMI should be considered

The principle of territorialism the consequences of an insolvency proceeding will only apply to the country where the insolvency proceeding has started or commenced. In other words, where a country or state exercised exclusive jurisdiction over a debtor within its own territory or country/state. Here, there is no cooperation between different jurisdictions to secondary or accompanying proceedings in other states. So there can be many insolvency proceedings in different countries where debtors have assets. Here, only those creditors in the specific country are able to participate in the proceedings.

Question 2.3 [maximum 4 marks]

Briefly indicate initiatives undertaken to assist with the resolution of international insolvency issues in Latin America and discuss the differences between those initiatives.

The initiatives undertaken to assist with the resolution of international insolvency issues in Latin America are Motevideo Treaties (1889) and (1940) and the Bustamante Code (1928). The main difference is the degree in which each initiative allows for a single insolvency proceeding with universal and worldwide effect throughout the member states. The 1889 treaty deals with personal and corporate insolvency proceedings and jurisdiction is chosen where the debtor is commercially domiciled where he has domicile in one member state to the treaty (here there is one set of proceedings even if the debtor conducts business activities in other states). Here there is also the possibility of concurrent proceedings were a debtor has two or more independent business in different treaty states. The Bustamante Code is different because it aligns itself with a more universal approach where one proceeding can have worldwide and universal effect.

here is scope to elaborate for example with respect to the different members of the different agreements

QUESTION 3 (essay-type questions) [15 marks in total]

Question 3.1 [maximum 7 marks]

It is said that the terms “bankruptcy” and “insolvency” may be used interchangeably. Discuss whether or not you agree with this statement, and why or why not. In your answer take care to include a discussion regarding: (i) what meaning may be ascribed to “bankruptcy” and “insolvency”, (ii) the essential characteristics of “bankruptcy” and “insolvency” and (iii) any differences that may arise when a “bankruptcy” / “insolvency” involves a corporation rather than an individual.

I disagree with the statement that bankruptcy and insolvency may be used interchangeably. Bankruptcy means refers to the insolvency of a single natural human person while insolvency refers to the insolvency of a company or corporation. This is not the case in every jurisdiction. Insolvency means the financial affairs of an entity while bankruptcy refers to the process of being placed into formal bankruptcy proceedings. Insolvency is a development of bankruptcy and has evolved. It is when the value liabilities of a debtor or company exceed the value of its assets and where the debts of the company cannot be paid as and when they fall due.

This is a 7 mark sub-question that required greater elaboration, including with respect to essential characteristics and differences (as set out in the question itself).

Question 3.3 [maximum 3 marks]

Briefly discuss what is meant by “hard law” and what is meant by “soft law” in the context of international insolvency. In your answer you should also provide examples and discuss the varying success of “hard” and “soft” laws in providing solutions to the challenges of international insolvency.

Soft law in the context of international insolvency means agreements/instrument/measure that are not strictly legally binding but have some normative or coercive effects. Public international law involves soft law which are treaties and conventions. The most successful soft law approach has been what UNCITRAL has done. UNCITRAL devolved a Model Law on Cross-border insolvency which member states could adopt.

Private international law involves hard law, which is a country's domestic law.

Private international law may involve soft law treaties and conventions which become enforceable as part of a State's domestic law. This is because States become signatories and therefore bind themselves and affect their domestic law accordingly.

Elaboration is warranted.
